Be Greater than the Average

ThinK:
truthful, helpful, inspiring, necessary, kind

Last month our focus was on HELPFUL NECESSITY; two key pieces of the THINK approach imperative to the success of our educational system and our students. This month we find ourselves zeroing in on TRUTHFUL KINDNESS.

What exactly does this concept mean?

It means that we seek out facts and information in order to develop our decisions.

We are not biased.

We do not judge or jump to conclusions.

We formulate intelligent thought patterns based on facts, not the latest fad, emotion or thought.

We practice diplomacy,
and tact, while communicating our messages;
and invest in making our future better -
- and the future of our students better,
because when you are focusing on the long-range,
today might feel pretty uncomfortable...

But we keep on rolling forward,
because it would be unkind to placate today
while setting up failure for the future.

We build up ourselves and our students so that together we can rise.

Beating down will not help us climb.

We build up.

We build up.

We build up.

We know where we stand.

We seek facts and information.

We make decisions today to build a better tomorrow.

We invest.

We carry the difficult load.

We thrive.

We refuse to merely survive.
